Finding and Citing Creative Commons Images
Copyright & Creative Commons

- Anything you create is automatically protected by copyright.
- Others need to get YOUR permission to use your creation in their work.
- This isn’t realistic or practical given how easy it is to find and use online content.
- Creative Commons provides a system of licenses that allows the creators to determine exactly how they want their content to be used.
Creative Commons Licenses

Four Conditions

- Attribution
- Share-alike
- Non-commercial
- No Derivatives

Types of Licenses:

- Most Open: Public Domain
- Medium Open: BY, BY-SA
- Restricted: BY-NC, BY-NC-SA, BY-ND
Creative Commons Licenses

- Public Domain
- Creative Commons BY
- Creative Commons BY-SA
Creative Commons Licenses

- CC BY NC
- CC BY ND
- CC BY NC SA
- CC BY NC ND
Creative Commons Image Attributions

To create an attribution, you need:

- Title of the work
- Creator (can be an internet pseudonym)
- License (write out full license name or use abbreviated version)
- Provide a link back to the work

Image sites vary in how easy it is to find this information.
Creative Commons Attribution Formula:

Title by Creator is licensed under a [license name] license.

Brooklyn Bridge New York City by Martin is licensed under an Attribution 2.0 Generic license.

OR

Brooklyn Bridge New York City by Martin is licensed under a CC BY 2.0 license.

Last Step
Link the tile to the Flickr image page.
Link the license name to the license page on creativecommons.org